Contents

Special Issue ‘Digital Humanities 2013: Freedom to Explore’
Edited by Bethany Nowviskie, Melissa Terras and Katherine Walter

Editorial
Introduction: Freedom to Explore
Bethany Nowviskie 281

Original Articles
Getting there from here. Remembering the future of digital humanities
Willard McCarty 283

Geographical and linguistic diversity in the Digital Humanities
Isabel Galina Russell 307

Mapping Homer’s Catalogue of Ships
Courtney Evans and Ben Jasnow 317

What Ever Happened to Project Bamboo?
Quinn Dombrowski 326

Judy Malloy’s seat at the (database) table: A feminist reception history of early hypertext literature
Kathi Inman Berens 340

Web-based discovery and integration of archaeological historic properties inventory data: The Digital Index of North American Archaeology (DINAA)

‘The Sounds of the Psalter: Computational Analysis of Soundplay’
Drayton C. Benner 361

Crowdsourcing individual interpretations: Between microtasking and macrotasking
Brandon Walsh, Claire Maiers, Gwen Nally, Jeremy Boggs and Praxis Program Team 379

Joint and multi-authored publication patterns in the Digital Humanities
Julianne Nyhan and Oliver Duke-Williams 387
Geographic visualization of place names in Swedish literary texts
Lars Borin, Dana Dannėlls and Leif-Jörn Olsson

Visibility and meaning in topic models and 18th-century subject indexes
Jeffrey M. Binder and Collin Jennings

Automatic detection of reuses and citations in literary texts
Jean-Gabriel Ganascia, Peirre Glaudes and Andrea Del Lungo

Collaborative authorship: Conrad, Ford and Rolling Delta
Jan Rybicki, David Hoover and Mike Kestemont

Simulation of the Complex System of Speech Interaction: Digital Visualizations
William A. Kretzschmar, Jr and Ilkka Juuso

Epistolary voices. The case of Elisabeth Wolff and Agatha Deken
Karina van Dalen-Oskam

Citations, contexts, and humanistic discourse: Toward automatic extraction and classification
Chris Alen Sula and Matthew Miller